

CORNWALL

Hawker's Hut walk

This gentle clifftop walk encompasses breath-taking views of North Cornwall's coast. You'll come across a beautiful church, believed to date back to Saxon times, and of course, Hawker's Hut, the refuge of poet Reverend Robert Hawker. On a clear day, Lundy Island can be seen, and there's also a great deal of interesting local wildlife.

Information

Address: Morwenstow, Cornwall EX23 9SR

OS map: Explorer 126; Landranger 190

Activity: Walking

Moderate: A well signed and reasonably flat, circular walk. For further details, please see Terrain section.

Dog friendly: Dogs are welcome, but please keep them on short leads near livestock.

Full trail: Miles: 1 (km: 1.6)

Access: Challenging

Duration: 40 mins

Terrain

A well signed and reasonably flat, circular walk. The ground can get muddy, especially after rain. Wear some good footwear.

Total steps: 10

Start point: Rectory Farm tea-room, grid ref: SS205153

1. Start in the National Trust car park next to the Rectory Farm tea-room (tenant-run).
2. Follow a track at the far end of the car park, past the church to a gate, following signs for the coast path.
3. Go through the gate into a field and keep following the path along the top of the field.
4. You should pass through two gateways until you reach a third gate at the cliff edge.
5. Turn left through the gate and follow the coast path signs to Stanbury.
6. Follow the path along the cliff edge; you'll see signs for Hawker's Hut. Go and have a look if you like, it's only a short detour from the route.
7. Go through the kissing gate at the end of the field and take a sharp left.
8. Follow the path along the hedgerow and through another kissing gate until you reach another gate at the end of the field.
9. Go through the gate onto a wide track and follow the track. Before you reach the barn, you'll see a stile on your left signed 'Rectory Farm tea-rooms'.
10. Cross the stile and walk across a field until you reach another stile. Cross this and keep going down the track until you reach Rectory Farm tea-room.

End point: Rectory Farm tea-room, grid ref: SS205153