

WALES

Tŷ Mawr Wybrnant and Cwm Wybrnant walk

This walk takes you through the natural and social history of this Welsh upland valley. At its centre is Tŷ Mawr Wybrnant, the birthplace of Bishop William Morgan, who translated the Bible into Welsh. You'll walk through traditional upland farmland, along forest roads and an old drovers' road.

! Toilets

The toilets at Tŷ Mawr Wybrnant are open when the farmhouse is open. Please check our opening times before setting out.

Terrain

A mixture of forestry tracks, open fields and an old drovers' road. It's advisable to wear suitable footwear.

Total steps: 6

Start point: Tŷ Mawr Wybrnant car park, grid ref: SH771523

1. Walk to the entrance of the car park and turn left down the tarmac lane towards Tŷ Mawr Wybrnant, a 16th-century farmhouse.
2. As you reach the entrance gate at Tŷ Mawr Wybrnant, you're welcome to stop off and explore the grounds, before continuing along the track over the river and to your right. Take the gate on your left and begin ascending a rough path.
3. Continue up a steep path. Pass through a small gate before turning left past a large smooth rock on your right. Keep the dry-stone wall on your left.
4. Walk along the drovers' path until you come to the junction with the forestry path. Turn left. You'll soon reach seats that overlook the Wybrnant valley.
5. Continue along the forestry road.
6. At the fork, bear right to continue along the path and return to the car park.
