Dog friendly: Dogs are welcome on leads, however they are not allowed on the boardwalk of the National Nature Reserve. Watch out for local notices as there may be restrictions in woodland or farmland at sensitive times of year, during the lambing season, or between March and the end of July when ground-nesting birds are on eggs or raising their young. Please be vigilant when walking near livestock, especially those with young. Try not to get too close and keep your dog on a lead under close control. If approached by cows, move away as carefully and quietly as possible, and if necessary let go of your dog's lead and let it run free, the dog will outrun the cows.

Full trail: Miles: 4.5 (km: 7.2)

Terrain

Total steps: 6

Start point: Watersinks car park, grid ref: SD895658

1. Join the Pennine Way and head northwards along the grassy path towards Malham Tarn. The Pennine Way continues to the overflow of Malham Tarn before joining the track to Tarn House. Continue along the track with Great Close Scar on your right.
2. Walk along the shore of the tarn and pass through a gate at the entrance to the woods and continue to Tarn House. As you pass Tarn House, stop off at the Orchid House and have a look around the exhibition area. From here continue on through the woods.
3. Walk along the track, passing the bird hide on your left. At Sandhill's Cottage on your left, take the track that leads to the National Nature Reserve and follow the boardwalk through the reserve. Where it joins an unmade track at the other end, turn left to the road.
4. When you reach the road, turn left and walk along it, taking the left fork after 327 yards (300m). Continue along the road to the next crossroad. Go over the stile diagonally in front of you to your left and cross the field, heading towards the smelt mill chimney.
5. At the chimney, enjoy the views before walking away from the tarn, heading uphill towards the corner of the field, above the barn. At the corner, follow the wall on your left to the wall in front of you (leading uphill). Go over the stile and continue eastwards until the land begins to descend. You will see a track at the foot of the hill leading to a gate in the wall to your left.
6. Go through the gate and follow the track across Dean Moor, in a north-easterly direction until you reach the road and car park at Watersinks.
